UGC-HRDC, Panjab University, Chandigarh -160014, India

The concept of human rights is dynamic in nature that has evolved with time to cover newer areas of human society. The constant evolution of human rights can be realized from the fact that today we have a 'third generation' of human rights. Human rights education is concerned with not only exposing these practices and flaws in the law and its implementation, but also with re-examining existing laws in the framework of human rights that result in indirect violence. Human Rights Education act as a gateway for behavioral and societal change. As a result, "Human Rights" in its broadest sense cannot be limited to rights relating to an individual's physical well-being, but must encompass all conditions in a society that make human existence possible with dignity and honor. The FDP will cover not only the issues pertaining to values and ethics in higher education but solution and recommendations in order to improve the higher education system.
