Evolving the Principles for Ensuring Social, Economic and Political Justice to Women: A Study.

Gyanendra Kumar Sharma,
Department of Laws.

Summary of Research.

The research is aimed at evolving the principles for ensuring social, economic and political justice to women. One of the key areas of the research is to develop a mechanism to protect the interest of the deprived class amongst the deprives, i.e. the he transsexuals and the she transsexuals as in both cases a woman is involved.

The women in India are not considered as person. They may have some rights as wife, sister, daughter or mother. But in general, away from this relational capacity, they are considered as the sex object or an article.

Detailed empirical study was conducted by the researcher. On the bases of the responses of respondents from different classes, the mechanism is developed for ensuring the social, economic and political justice to women including the transsexual people.

The researcher opined that awareness should be initiated within the family to eradicate any family and social discrimination between a boy child and a girl child. A gender discrimination free family can only constitute a gender neutral society and ultimately a gender neutral state. Thus, the researcher also suggested State sponsored Pre-Marriage Conciliation Cells and the Post-Marriage Reconciliation Centers for prosperous families, ultimately a prosperous state. The centers will sensitize family members for gender discrimination free family and the society.

There is a prominent say in the society that certain acts are designed by the Almighty God for men only. The say favours the gender based work distinction. On this issue, the researcher has opined that to claim equality in status and opportunity, women should be ready to share all responsibilities even of hazardous nature. This is proved in the research that there is no work based distinction between the two sexes and the genders.

Most of the women have no say in the social, economic and the family decision making. They are considered as the sex object by the husband and an article by other family members even by other female members. The Criminal Laws Amendment Act, 2013, is also against the interest of married women or the women in relation. Thus, to ensure the equal participation of women in social and economic matters of the family, researcher suggested the marital rapes to be made punishable. The researcher also proposed an amendment in The Indian Penal Code, 1890 to make marital rape a punishable offence.

The prostitution cannot be eradicated from India and from the world communities. The researcher suggested some state mechanism to protect the interest and rights of sex workers as the first step forward for legalization of sex trade. The icon of morality in prostitution cannot be attributed to the women alone. They are service providers, whereas, men enjoy the services on payment. If any person is responsible for the immorally in this trade, that is the male and not the female because she has adopted it for survival of the family, whereas, it is not true for the men. He goes to the prostitute for enjoyment and fun on payment. Prostitution is the most hazardous work under compulsion and state should make a distinction between the forced and the voluntary sex trade. Every women has a right to use her body for payment, whereas, the forced prostitution should be made severally punishable.

Transsexuals (she/he) are most neglected community worldwide. In fact, they have no right in the society and mostly leading animal life. We all know the police and administrative atrocities with them. Social behavior is also tortuous. To protect the rights of transsexuals, the researcher has suggested Legislation titled “The Protection of Rights of Transsexual Genders Bill, 2014.” The transsexuals have all possible human rights including the right to medical treatment and the change of sex for biological and genetical cure.

The researcher has also suggested the establishment of an “Intensive Research and Educational Center” to conduct the research on the cause and the cure of transsexuality and to ensure quality education to the transsexuals in the Center.

The researcher has also suggested a mechanism to protect the right of sexual orientation. Let’s get real. Women’s and the men’s decency should be discussed while ensuring the right of sexual orientation. Let men and women decide what they want and desire but under self controlled moral and state enacted rules and regulations. Any hitch on the decent behavior is an example of gender bias. Likewise, fashion parades, advertisements and the beauty contests showing women as sex object should be regulated by law in interest and for ensuring the dignity of women.

Most of the researches are part of the University’s library. The researcher has suggested a mechanism to implement the research findings. The researcher suggested constituting a Task Force of young, energetic and enthusiastic professionals and the social workers to implement the research findings on certain parameters to the satisfaction of the researcher.